

ORGANIZATIONAL LEADERSHIP, B.A.

The Organizational Leadership program helps individuals develop their leadership capabilities through the study of psychology, group behavior, ethics and planned change. The interdisciplinary program explores how individual, group and system factors influence workplace behavior and teaches the principles of effective communication, problem-solving and decision making, as well as team-related skills by using experiential learning opportunities. This major also prepares students who wish to undertake graduate study in various areas of organization studies or management.
